ON LITTLE ROUND TOP

The Magnificent Monument That Marks the Spot Held by 155th.

A STORY OF PITTSBURG ZOUAVES And What They and Their Comrades Ac complished July 2 and 3.

THEY DEFIED AND WITHSTOOD DEATH

Yesterday and to-day are anniversary oc casions which, to the veterans of the gallant old One Hundred and Fifty-fifth, are as significant as is the morrow to a celebrating nation July 2 and 3 will ever be remem- James W. Collins' Suggestions on Railros bered by them so long as life shall last. Their magnificent monument, now first illustrated in print (to be dedicated in September), and the story of what that monument commemorates will both be scanned Little Round Top was the key of the position at Gettysburg 26 years ago. What, then, was the key of the position at Vicksburg? General Grant schieved the surrender of Pemberton's command. General

Meade, aided mainly by General Warren, FOUGHT AND WON GETTYSBURG. The sacred soil of the Keystone State had been invaded. On the 1st day of July, that year, General Reynolds, the illustrious com-mander of the right wing of the Potomac, fought so valiantly that his corps forced back the overwhelming tide of the rebellion invasion. This was actually the turning point of the war; but had it not been for the acute and alert strategy of General G. K. Warren, the 2d of July night might have ended in disaster, and then the Army of that even they might not have been able to hold any position. General Warren, with his eagle eye, mounted Weed's hill and watched the tactics. A few minutes' observation satis-fied him that Weed's Hill, so-called now, but then called Little Round Top, was, as before said, the key of the position. General Sickles had then lost his leg. His Third Corps were using men, so many at every fire of the enemy. the wonder was that, with their inferior num-bers, they could withstand such a terrific fire, and yet continue to constantly kill so many of the enemy by rapid execution. A DREADFUL DOUBLE-QUICK. When the First Division of the Fifth Corps had double-quicked from the rear of Culp's Hill to the wheat field, they lost at least half of their entire number in killed alone. It was then that the other divisions of the corps came to the rescue. General Weed's brigade passed to the rescue. General Weed's brigade passed through the wheat field far enough to fire three effective volleys of buck and ball and then had to double-quick by the left flank to hold Little Round Top at all hazards. The first salute that brigade received was the death of the brigadier. General Weed, on the summit of Little Round Top; the next the death of Colonel Patrick O'Rourke, of the One Hundred and Fortieth New York. The Ninety-first Philadeiphia suffered also.

The One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Zouave Volunteers, that had not the advantage of the summit, but had to submit to what fighting could be made on the declivity, did not lose in killed and wounded so heavily, because of the fact that, while flanked on both sides and confronted by all the charges of McLaw's Texan Brigade, they poured into the enemy so charging and into the Devil's Den and to the right of their regiment, so as to

BELIEVE GENERAL SICKLE'S CORPS while withdrawing. It was thus, by loading and firing too rapidly for the enemy, that Lit-tie Round Top had been secured. Those who were there know it. Then came in the gallant Pennsylvania Reserves, headed by the Buck-tails. Before that they had fought desperately and lost too heavily; but the regulars next filled up the gap between the valley-ending cemetery and Weed's Hill with the Sixth This completed the victory of July 2, 1863, and secured the most impregnable position on the battlefield.

On July 3, 1863, Little Round Top was not, On July 3, 1863, Little Round Top was not, because it could not be, assaulted by artillery. Those Union soldiers who participated in both fights, namely: on the 2d and 3d days of July, 1863, are generally of opinion that the most desperate fight was on the 2d. They "pish" at the third day's fight, because the right and left flanks of the Union army, the infantry more especially, had to remain inactive, and only the Union artillery fired effectively, while, not Pickett's, but Hill's division was advancing to the charge, and received such a terrific and effectual repulse.

THE NEXT CENSUS.

Request From Superintendent Porte About Alleghenv County Statistics.

Prothonotary Bradley yesterday received a letter of inquiry from Superintendent Porter, of the Census Office, Department of the Interior. Mr. Porter asks for the cost of transcribing the records of mortgages in Allegheny county for the three consecutive years of 1887, 1888 and 1889. The statistics to be compiled are for the census of 1890, and will comprise the names and addresses of mortgager and mortgage, the amount of the mortgage, the rate of interest, period to run, and area covered.

By the cost Mr. Porter states that he refers to the number of days' labor likely to be required in the performance of the work. The amount of labor will be immense, and as yet neither Prothonotary Bradley or Recorder Graham can give any idea of the extent of it. Mortgages are now being received by the Recorder at the rate of from 50 to 75 per day. About Allegheny County Statistics.

AN APPEAL PROBABLE

The City Will Fight Judge Slagle's Business Tax Decision.

The Assessor Explains How the Ruling Affects Municipal Affairs.

CASE AND MORELAND TO CONSULT.

FORTY OTHER FIRMS ARE INVOLVED

A rumor was current vesterday that City Attorney Moreland was considering the matter of making an appeal from the decision of Judge Slagle in the equity test case of the Hartman Steel Company against the city of Pittsburg, restraining the aslinquent tax collector from collecting the tax levied upon the company on certain classes of sales.

The decision, coming at the time it did, opens up a new phase of the tax collectors business, and may lead to trouble. The business, and may lead to trouble. The books and lists in the tax assessors' office were closed on Saturday, and it is a question whether the city will secure any money from the wholesale liquor dealers and bottlers who will be granted a license or not. Chief Assessor Case stated yesterday that all the assessments had been made for the ensuing year, and as these people were not granted a license by Judge White, they were left off the list. It is a question whether a special list can now be made for them, as the books have been closed up by the expiration of time, and the law may not allow the time to be extended.

AN APPEAL PROBABLE. Mr. Case will consult with City Attorney Moreland to-day and ask his opinion on the matter. If the City Attorney advises him to make the assessments he will do so, and let the liquor men pay the taxes or fight the matter in the courts. City Attorney Moreiand was asked by a reporter what he intended to do about the matter. He stated that he had not yet re-by a reporter what he intended to do about the matter. He stated that he had not yet received the decree from the Quit, and would not get it until this mornings Until then he did not know what he would do.

Chief Assessor Case stated that the loss to the city from Judge Slazle's decision would be very slight this year, and next year he thought it would be about $10,000. He said there were about 40 other firms similarly situated as the Hartman Company, and they would, in future, probably refuse to make any returns. The situation, he claimed, was entirely wrong, and it would probably result in the total abolition of the business tax, which the Assessor has been trying to have abolished for some time. Mr. Case said:

"This matter of releasing these firms from this tax is extremely wrong and unjust to other manufacturers in the city. There are any number of mills, factories, etc., just lying outside the city and county, who do their business here but will not have to pay any tax. These concerns have their offices, warehouses, etc., in this city, and take advantage of the shipping facilities that the other firms pay for. We have tried to assess them on all the business they transact in the city proper, but they made the returns themselves and could make them as low as they wished.

Jono from the yards in the west and have it shipped to their customers. The bill is made out to the sale. As the stuff was not delivered in this city we cannot collect any business tax, although it was attrictly a Pittaburg transaction.

"The drummers cannot be taxed in this city, either, although they should be. The only way we can get at this class of people is to tax agents here who are on salary. The drummers do their business here and compete with Pittsburg merchants who pay a business tax. The fact that these outside manufacturers are not taxed will have a tendency to drive other large concerns out of town to the country. I am gliad though, the matterlis settled definitely, glad, though, the matterlis settled definitely, and we will wait until the whole theory is abolished. This will probably be done next Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
